

previously unknown, which ejected columns of water mixed with air through its vents